THIS GRADUATE TRACK IS ASSOCIATED WITH TWO RESEARCH LABORATORIES

- The CERDI – Research center on international development
- The CMH – Research center in legal and political sciences

MASTER'S DEGREE

ATTRACTIVITY

• Merit scholarships

Scholarships are granted to students from these master's degrees after reviewing their academic file.

On average, two scholarships are awarded per track, each worth €6,000.

• Guest Lecturers

Specific budgets are allocated to the Graduate Track in order to invite foreign professors to come and teach at the Université Clermont Auvergne. This arrangement allows students to benefit from international specialists recognized in their field.

OCCUPATIONAL INTEGRATION

• Internships grants « International institutions »

Internships in international institutions are of particular interest for the professional integration of students.

Interns are often faced with greater financial pressures due to the high cost of living in cities where international institutions are located.

The purpose of this internship grant is to partially compensate for the specific cost of living related to certain cities or to a particular internship situation (transportation costs in particular).

PhD

RESEARCH TRAINING

1) Strengthening programme in scientific English

The programme entails two features:

- A scientific English course in semester 1, adapted to the specificities of the disciplines, based on reference journals.
- A tutorial on writing a document in English throughout the year.

2) Mentoring in Research methodology

The aim is to mobilize PhD students to assist Master's students with research methodology issues.

PURSUING A PhD

Students can pursue doctoral studies in various disciplines, in particular within the doctoral school of Economic, Legal, Political and Management Sciences (SEJPG) of Clermont-Ferrand.

Doctoral scholarships are dedicated to the theme of international development.
